Area:

-The village of Pockley is about 2 miles to the north east of Helmsley, separated by the picturesque Riccall Dale. One of the few truly unspoilt North Yorkshire villages, it is characterized by its beautiful thatched and old stone cottages which line the main street. Situated on the very edge of the North Yorkshire Moors, the village is a fantastic base from which to explore some outstanding natural scenery, and at the same time it remains surprisingly well placed in relation to an excellent range of local amenities with the market towns of Kirkbymoorside and Helmsley just a short drive away. Schooling is also particularly well catered for with Ryedale Secondary School just a few miles to the south in Nawton, as well as Ampleforth College and Terrington School beyond. The larger market town of Thirsk offers a substantial range of shops and services, including a rail link to London Kings Cross in just over two hours.
